FELLOW-CITIZENS.

SOME of the Senatorial or court party of our state have suggested that our self-created body of senators, had they been fully certified it was the wish of the majority of the people, would, the last session of legislature, have passed the bill for the purpose of taking the sense of the people on the propriety of calling a Convention in order to amend our Constitution. —To which, by the by, I scarcely can pay the least credit. —For men are not very fond of laying down that power, which, should a Convention be effected, it is more than probable they never can re-obtain.

—But, however, the next session let them have no such subterfuge. —In each county in our state, cannot we, who ardently desire the errors and evil tendencies of our Constitution to be corrected, most humbly petition our legislature to make us a law for the most desirable purpose of calling a Convention to establish a system of government on true republican principles?

In the course of two years last, so many able pens have to amply hung out to open view the rotten and disfranchised parts of our Constitution; so that little more can be said on this topic but what might justly be deemed mere repetition. —I therefore I need not point out the mischiefs which will naturally and inevitably result from the exceedingly blending and confounding the three departments in government which ought to be entirely separate and distinct from

* The epithet self-created body of senators may perhaps, be offensive to some of the senatorial capacities; therefore let us with some degree of precision examine the grounds of this appellation. —It must be granted in the short space of one year only, after they are elected, the whole body of senators, by deaths, disqualifications or otherwise might be possibly extinct. —In this critical situation of affairs what must be done? Shall a fresh set of electors be chosen to elect senators? Here is mysterious constitutional darkness all. —By the constitution no provision whatever is made for this case. —This case, 'tis to be hoped, will but seldom occur. —And, however, we are not deprived of this consolation, should at any time our senators be reduced to the small number of one or two only; it is almost like the Phoenix, from the ashes of senators, senators will arise. —Or, rather, like a nest egg or two (ardon the simile) they can lay, hatch, create or make as many supple senators as ever can possibly be wanted; and that likewise without ever asking the leave of, or consulting the common people about it. —Have we more than four original senators at this time, or not?

each other, the legislative, judicial and executive. —Which call loudly for reformation. —Neither need I point out the subject, the degraded situation we are in in choosing men to elect the governor and senators for us. —For this is certainly an odious, a dreadful remove of power from the fountain head; implicitly affirming the understanding of a sensible people vigilant of their rights; —conveying the idea that the common people are only fit to choose such trifles as are fit for the lower demi regions of legislation; very inadequate to select those volatile air-balloons-like geniuses calculated only to soar and play their part amid the rarified atmosphere of the upper regions of legislation. —Besides are not four years too long a period for the governor & senators to exercise such exalted powers? The Roman commonwealth flourished whilst her highest magistracies were annually elected. When that ceased to be the case, I need not inform the enlightened historian what were the tragical events. —Indeed it must be confessed 'tis the vigor, the vitals of a Commonwealth to have the bulk of her magistrates and officers civil as well as military, annually and immediately elected by the people. —Because their short continuance in office will stimulate them to the utmost to do their duty; if they regard honour or reputation, or even harbour the smallest wish ever to be re-elected; and because they then derive their power and receive it directly from the hands of their proper masters the people. All hail annual elections, never failing source and peculiar genius of pure republican principles!

Foreign Intelligence.

CLOCOW, (in Galatia) June 10.

An Austrian officer is just returned from the frontiers of Poland, where he had been sent to save some of our boats on the Vistula, loaded with corn, which had nearly fallen a prey to the Russian vengeance, mistaking them for the Polish. This officer was almost an eye witness to the battle which happened on the 6th instant between the combined Russian and Prussian armies, and the Poles. It seems that the intention of the Polish general was to attack the Russian corps under Denison, about eleven thousand strong, besides the Cossack, before their junction with the Prussians, but his plan failed, as on the fifth the Prussians had effected their junction with the Russian army, consisting of near twenty thousand men, commanded by the king in person. The Poles had then no alternative, but to change their plan into a defensive one and expecting to be attacked by an army of far superior force, they prepared to receive him. The position for their army was masterly chosen and all the villages in flank were guarded by small detachments and field pieces. The combined armies began the attack at eight in the morning: the Poles defended themselves with courage without losing an inch of ground, and even the peasants armed with pikes dared to advance within fifteen yards of the Prussian batteries. The battle was obstinate and bloody till about 2 o'clock; when the Prussians, after repeated attacks, succeeded to drive the Polish detachment, with four field pieces, from a village, where they established immediately a battery, which annoyed to much the flanks of the Polish army, that they gave way and began about three o'clock to retreat, leaving some cannons dismounted. Their retreat was conducted with much judgment and coolness; that the victorious armies could not take any advantage on their rear, nor even make any prisoners, except those who were left wounded on the field of battle. The loss of the Poles may be computed to about 1500, and 12 cannon, besides a few of the flying artillery; some of the guns had Russian arms upon them. The loss of the combined armies must be double: three Prussian officers have been killed, and a great many wounded. The king of Prussia had a narrow escape; two of his Aids de Camp had their horses killed by his side. His son, prince Louis, showed so much bravery to the perfect satisfaction of his father, that he has been made lieutenant general, and knighted with the order of the black eagle on the field of battle. The Russian general Denison, and two Prussian generals, received the same orders. Many officers have been rewarded with promotions for their gallant behaviour, and strict execution of his majesty's commands. The Polish general Grochowki, who formerly had been in the guards of his Prussian majesty, was killed in this action. The Austrian troops are daily increasing in this country, in order to guard our frontiers.

BRUSSELS, June 23.

Six in the evening.

The alarm of the inhabitants has not subsided. All the nobility and persons of property are gone, and the people left to their fate. This circumstance has made a deep impression on the minds of the people, one of whom, as I passed the Hotel de Ville, exclaimed to his companions, who were listening to him with great attention:

"It is thus we are always treated. In the hour of calamity these governors and nobility desert us, and in the period of prosperity they return and riot on the produce of our labour."

Perhaps there never was a speech more calculated ad captandum than this.

On the 21st the French were in great force at Gosselles, and their advanced posts were between Gosselles and Frattier. General Spiegl was then at Quatre Bus, gen. Beaulieu at Petit Mesnel. A most tremendous cannonade was heard which proceeded from the army before Charleroi.

Yesterday the enemy advanced and secured the position of Gemappe. The movement occasioned general alarm.

Towards the evening, however, it was reported that general Latorp had succeeded in driving the enemy from their position at Chapelle Herlaumont and that he had advanced his posts to Trefignies and Anderlues. This intelligence was not confirmed by any official accounts.

During the night, which few of the alarmed inhabitants passed in sleep, it was said that the French had fallen back from Gosselles, and that the prince of Cobourg had arrived at Ath, about nine leagues from Brussels. The cannonade against Charleroi continued with unabated fury.

June 24, nine o'clock P.M. The emigrants having offered their service to marshall Bender, they were assembled in the menage of the court. They were there divided into four companies of 130 men each. The necessary arms and ammunition were delivered to them, together with two six pounders.

A proclamation, in the name of his imperial majesty, was this morning issued by sound of trumpets and beat of drums. In this proclamation the inhabitants of Brussels and the suburbs are invited to assemble, form officers, and be in readiness to march at a moment's notice. Hitherto this proclamation has not been attended with the desired success.

The following intelligence contained in a private letter has just been read to the inhabitants.

"As soon as the prince of Cobourg received intelligence that the French threatened Brussels, he removed his head quarters from Tournay to Ath, in order to watch the motions of the enemy. He arrived at Ath on the night before last, and immediately made the necessary dispositions to force the enemy to abandon their enterprise. He sent a large detachment to relieve Charleroi; and an attack being made on the enemy, they were forced to relinquish those positions which they had taken on the preceding day.

"The Prince Cobourg was expected at Enghein last night."

What degree of credit this deserves I have not been able to ascertain.

LONDON, June 2.

Of the number of British ships which, within these last six months, have been taken by the enemy, it would not be easy to give an accurate list, but in that period, it may be relied on as a fact, that our court of Admiralty have not condemned more than ten French vessels!!!

American Occurrences.

GREENFIELD, August 28.

This morning will march from the military stores on Federal Hill, in Springfield, and embark on board a boat for Middletown, and from thence to New Jersey, a detachment of active likely, new recruits, completely armed, well equipped, commanded by captain Cornelius Lyman, of the second subaltern of the United States.

The recruits from Middletown, Albany, West Point and New York, will rendezvous at New Brunswick, and form a battalion of about 200 men, which capt. Lyman will join, and march with all possible expedition to the head quarters of gen. Wayn's army.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 6.

Ancient history afford us many striking instances of patriotic bravery, among which few are more brilliant, than that of Leonidas at the straits of Thermopylae; but even that is scarcely to be compared to the following, which is said to have taken place at Guadaloupe. Before the English landed, the French had sprung a mine, and that they might make a sure destruction of their enemies, a French officer proposed to devote himself to death to serve his country, and agreed to go over to the English, feign himself a deserter, and lead them on the fatal spot. This he did; and then, giving the signal agreed upon, to his countrymen, was blown to pieces with the whole body of the English, consisting of more than 600 men.

BALTIMORE, August 29.

The following extract of a letter from a gentleman in France, dated July 1, was obligingly handed to us by a respectable character of this town.

"The French convoy arrived the 14th of June, in the best state, not a vessel missing, with 15 rich prizes, mostly Indianmen. At one instant, couriers were sent to all the different towns of France with civic crowns—joy was universal.

"The army of the North consist of 160,000 men. The English have been cut to pieces in the vicinity of Ostend. The French take no prisoners. No quarters are received from the English. The French troops are encamped within a few leagues of Mayence. The king of Prussia has notified England he could no longer keep the field, if he did not receive from them full pay for 32,000 men—this is positive.

"Ten ships of the line have sailed from Toulon and are cruising in the Mediterranean. The Poles have slain 10,000 Russians in the field, and made 7000 prisoners at Grodno—the same fate followed them in the Ukraine. A Convention is meeting at Warsaw—they copy the French entirely. The Turks take a part with the Poles, and have four great armies in full march to the frontiers of Russia and Austria. Sweden and Denmark are said to declare in favour of Poland next spring.

"The Nancy, capt. Smith, of Baltimore, is brought into port. Twenty new sail of the line and twenty frigates will be ready by the end of this year. Mr. Munroe, in the Cincinnati is arrived safe."

KNOXVILLE, September 6.

On Monday last the General Assembly of this Territory commenced their session in this town.

General RUTHERFORD, long distinguished for his abilities and faithful services in the Legislature of North-Carolina, is appointed President of the Legislative Council.

On Wednesday the 2d instant the Legislative Council and members of the House of Representatives, convened together, as required by the Ordinance, for the government of the Territory; and proceeded to the election of a member to represent this Territory in the Congress of the United States, when JAMES WHITE, esq. of Davidson county was duly elected. The votes for James White 11.—for William Cocke 7.

INDIAN NEWS.

We understand that a party of men who went out from Fort Hamilton to bring in the body of Mr. Elliott, who was killed by the Indians, as mentioned in our last, among which was Mr. Elliott's servant who escaped when Mr. Elliott fell, having got the body in a coffin and in a wagon they were attacked by a party of Indians who defeated them, killed the servant took possession of the wagon and threw out the body of Mr. Elliott.—That on Friday last, a party from Cincinnati brought in the body to that place, where it was interred.

[From the Independent Gazetteer.]

Mr. Primer.

Being solicited to enter as a volunteer to suppress the infernal in the Western counties, I beg leave to observe—that I served in the Continental Army from the commencement of hostilities by the King of Great-Britain to the definitive treaty of peace, when I was honorably discharged and retired to my home, with assurances from my beloved General and the Representatives of my country that I should be paid in full agreeably to contract the specie amount of my stipulated wages.—A few months after a part of my wages was tendered in State notes and a part in final settlements; I was told to take that or nothing.—Necessity compelled me to take it although I was obliged to sell those Certificates to a gentleman, now a member of Congress for 3/4 in the pound, it being the highest price and more than the speculators in general gave for that species of property. I however expected my country would consider that public engagements had not been fulfilled nor public justice done,—but to my great mortification, heard Mr. Steel bring forward a motion on the floor of Congress, which was agreed by a great majority of the members, that the army had been lavishly paid by the rations they received, and moreover, Certificates for their wages, which if they had sold for 10/ in the pound, it was more than they had earned.

A government capable of every species of violation cannot enforce to itself a second time success in arms, and the members of it a harvest in speculation.—If the President had maintained his fidelity to his old army, his order would be sufficient to elect them from every part of the continent; every Officer and Soldier would refuse his place, and form a detachment for any emergency whatever;—but now there is a distrust of government for the payment of the Militia, and also of the propriety of the cause.

It is therefore my decided opinion that those gentlemen who reap the benefit of the late revolution by having become purchasers of Soldier's notes at 3/4 in the pound ought to be enrolled in Military form, and as they claim the revenue arising from the Excise Law, let them obey obedience to it—and not trouble
